Contract costing | Meaning | Features | Procedure
Contract costing is the tracking of costs associated with a specific contract with a customer. For example, a company bids for a large construction project with a prospective customer, and the two parties agree in a contract for a certain type of reimbursement to the company. This reimbursement is based, at least in part, on the costs incurred by the company in order to fulfill the terms of the contract.

Contract costing — AccountingTools

Contract costs should include costs that relate directly to the specific contract, plus costs that are attributable to the contractor's general contracting activity to the extent that they can be reasonably allocated to the contract, plus such other costs that can be specifically charged to the customer under the terms of the contract.

IAS 11 — Construction Contracts

Dream Home Inc., a real estate developing company, was accounting for its long-term contracts using the completed contract method prior to 2021. In 2021, it changed to the percentage-of-completion method. The company decided to use the same for income tax purposes. The tax rate enacted is 20%.

Chapter 22- Accounting Changes and Error Corrections ...

Batch costing . Batch costing is a form of specific order costing. It is very similar to job costing. Within each batch are a number of identical units but each batch will be different. Each batch is a separately identifiable cost unit which is given a batch number in the same way that each job is given a job number.
