Furthermore, evidence has shown that sensory input is important for recovery after stroke.

Sensorimotor learning refers to improvement, through practice, in the performance of sensory-guided motor behavior. Here we will focus primarily on learning studies of the hand and arm in humans. Based on our own scientific leanings and limited space for this review, we chose to neglect learning with eyes and legs.

Theories of sensorimotor learning emphasize two kinds of learning-related changes in sensorimotor programs: A) chunking and increasing conscious control of the learned sensorimotor response. B) transferring the neural control of the learned sensorimotor response to lower levels of the CNS and increasing conscious control of it.
