1. Thinking can't replace action. I sometimes think there is some kind of wish when overthinking that thinking will somehow replace action. A wish that if you just think enough you can find some easy way out or get what you want without having to actually do something. Without taking action you'll most likely not get what you want.

3 Good Reasons to Stop Thinking So Much, And How to Do It

Have you ever been in a situation where you can't stop thinking about him? You wake up in the morning, and there he is — on your mind first thing. You're thinking about him on the way to work or school... You're thinking about him every time you see something that reminds you of him... Infatuation is a 24/7 job it seems.

Men don't tell their guy friends that they miss him. He could also be trying to figure out of you like him. All the reasons why a guy will message, call, or say he's this.

What Does a Guy Mean When He Says He Is Thinking About You?

Agree that it is a risk. I think we expect a certain life from having kids, but get something very different! I feel like life is thankless at the moment - with a full-time job, a gobby self-assured 5 year old and a determined one year old I am shattered.

To think that the decision to have children is a risk

I don't think age is as important as making sure you have achieved what you would like before having children. If everything goes to plan I am hoping to be pregnant this year at 27. I graduated with a professional degree at 22, bought a house at 23, got married at 25 so it feels the right time for me but that doesn't mean it would be right for everyone.
